VICE PRESIDENT U Myint Swe said that the main obstacle toward Myanmar's economy was the illegal trade sector. As the illegal trade sector still remained strong it was a great hindrance to businesses conducted legally.

He said this as Chairman of the Private Sector Development Committee, while addressing the 10th coordination meeting of the Private Sector Development Committee (PSDC) held at the Ministry of Commerce in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday morning.

In addressing the meeting the Vice President said that the PSDC had been formed with 20 members by Notification No. 79/2016 dated 24 October 2016 of the Office of the President to accomplish five main tasks. Five work committees led by 3 deputy ministers and 2 permanent secretaries had been formed to implement the Committee's main tasks.

The first meeting of the PSDC was held on 28 November 2016. Four meetings were held in 2017, three meetings in 2018 and two, including this one were held in 2019. From the first to the ninth meeting 77 decisions were made out of which 69 were implemented while 8 were still being implemented. Relevant departments and organizations were urged to cooperate and work together towards completing the re-maintaining 8 decisions by setting up a time frame.

Trade plays an important role in the economic development of the country and private sector involvement was found to be more than 80 percent of the economy. To support the works for private sector development, regular meetings were held with business persons and to date 28 meetings had been held where 353 issues raised by business persons were resolved and responded to.

Some of the responses were related to laws and procedures requiring up to two or three stages of works that needs time. Furthermore meetings of officials from the five work committees, relevant ministerial departments and business persons were held to resolve the issues in steps. It was known by all that works implemented for private sector development had achieved some successes. Relevant ministerial departments, Nay Pyi Taw Council, State/Region governments were placing much emphasis toward conducting private sector development works quickly. The country's economic development will show good improvement only when the aims of private sector development were achieved.

Pyidaungsu Hluttaw continues debate on Constitution amendment report

THE Pyidaungsu Hluttaw held a second debate on the report submitted by the Joint Committee on Amending the 2008 Constitution during its seventh-day meeting, 13th regular session, yesterday.

Speaker's foreword

Speaker U T Khun Myat first announced that the assembly will continue hearing MPs remaining to debate on the joint committee's report. He said the comments of certain MPs during the previous meetings contained unsuitable language that threatened to undermine ethnic solidarity, and were consequently erased from the Hluttaw records.

The Speaker said while the assembly had been notified to debate only on the contents of the report and its suggestions and opinions, MPs have been found to be providing suggestions that are linked towards making amendments to a bill.

The Speaker urged the Hluttaw representatives to focus their debate on only the content of the report and warned them be mindful of comments that may subvert the integrity of any one department, organization, individual or ethnic race.

Debate on constitution amendment report begins

Firstly, MP U Sai Tun Sein of Mongpyin constituency said he did not oppose amending the Constitution and supports making necessary changes to benefit the nation. He said all MPs have sworn an oath of office in line with Schedule Four, Section 125 of the Constitution and had to adhere to this oath while ensuring consistency with existing laws.

Next, MP U Soe Thein of Kayah State constituency 9 said the actual process of making changes to the Constitution requires ample time for serious consideration and implementation. He asked what criteria were used to assign priority among the 3,765 amendment suggestions made by the 45-member joint committee.

He said voiced his opinion that while there may be facts that indeed require amending, negotiating the determination, possibilities and obligations would be the more suitable course of action. He said none of the members of the current constitution amendment committee are legal experts and thus, their meetings are akin to drafting a new constitution instead.

be careful not to fan the flames.

After that, MP U Khin Maung Thi of Loilem constituency said the joint committee's report does not provide clear explanations nor complies with sections 433 and 434, Chapter XII, of the Constitution that outline the steps to make amendments to it. Therefore, this report should not be continued and further processes should follow Chapter XII, suggested U Khin Maung Thi.

Following, MP U Toe Win of Tamway constituency said the joint committee's report was complied by members from 14 political parties and nonpartisan MPs elected by the people. As such, it cannot be denied that this report does not represent the interest of the people, he said. He urged everyone to show their support to the joint committee's reports, citing solidarity as the strength of a nation heading towards a democratic federal republic. Next, MP U Thet Naung of Lahe constituency close inspection of the joint committee's report reveals that they have adhered to their own five objectives outlined in section three of the report. He said this and the 3,765 amendment proposals indicate that the 2008 Constitution needs further progress to become a genuine reflection of the will of the people and democratic values.

U Thet Naung called for MPs to grasp the opportunity to make progress towards reconciliation and peace and unite the nation's internal strength. He said sections 22 and 24 of the joint committee's report show plans to follow the provisions in the 2008 Constitution and draft and submit a bill to amend it. He urged MPs to practice open-minded negotiations with each other as they work together on this matter. He seconded the motion approve the report.

Next, MP U Yi Mon (a) U Tin Thit of Pobbathiri constituency said amending the Constitution will bring the likelihood of achieving peace, ending armed conflicts and establishing a democratic federal republic much closer. He said failing to amend it would mean the government elected by the people would be deprived of a portion of its authority in handling national affairs.

He said the 45-member joint committee has performed their duties with constructive intention and enthusiasm, and the process must be continued until a proper bill to amend the constitution materializes to carry out the provisions in Chapter XII.

U Yi Mon said the duty to make the Constitution more democratic and incorporate genuine federalism is now present before the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw. He urged MPs to take this opportunity to fulfil their responsibilities as representatives of the public.

The report was then further debated by 17 Hluttaw representatives.

The report compiled by the Joint Committee on Amending the 2008 Constitution was first submitted to the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw on 15 July. Since then, it has been debated once on 30 July by 17 MPs, and again by 24 MPs in yesterday's meeting. The remaining programmes related to the report will be announced in a future date.—Myo Myint, Han Maw ■ (Translated by Zaw Htet Oo)

The main obstacle to the development of Myanmar's economy is illegal trade. A strong illegal trade poses a great impediment to conducting businesses legally. # K300-mln YBS bus terminal being built in Hlinethaya

By Nyein Nyein

A YBS bus terminal worth K300 million is being constructed at Tamargone in Hlinethaya Township, said U Hla Aung, the Joint Secretary of the Yangon Region Transport Authority (YRTA).

The bus terminal is being built on a 1.836-acre plot of land in Tamargone by the Pyay Aung Company, which won the tender for the project.

"We are constructing the YBS bus terminal with the aim of accommodating buses which are currently stopping outside that area. We also have plans to supply CNG in that area. However, it is only our intention. Currently, the Pyay Aung Company is clearing the ground. We will contribute to the development of the YBS," he added.

The YRTA's target is to construct a parking space for school ferries in Pazundaung Township. In addition, the transport authority is scouting sites to construct YBS terminals in other townships.

"The YRTA is not operating with the government's budget. We are spending the funds allocated proportionately by the YRTA management. The bus terminal located in front of the Dagon University cost a million Kyats. So, the Yangon regional government put the shares in the Yangon Bus Public Company (YBPC), which constructed that bus terminal. The plot of land for the bus terminal located in Htaukkyant was purchased by the YBPC, which constructed the bus terminal," said U Hla Aung. With land becoming scarce, the YRTA is facing problems finding suitable sites for constructing the bus terminals, he said. Currently, the transport authority is building terminals by renting land belonging to the Yangon City Development Committee, he added.

As there are not enough bus terminals currently, YBS buses are being parked along the roadside, leading to accidents and traffic jams, according to the YRTA.

Over 10,000 beehives raised in Magway Region

A total of 86 beekeepers have produced honey on a manageable scale by placing around 13,000 beehives near local sesame and plum farms in Magway Region.

Pollination by bees has benefited local farmers, too. While sesame and plum growers have seen high yields, beekeepers from the region have produced 250 tons of honey in 2018, and exported 200 tons of honey.

“Last year, we exported 200 tons of honey from Magway. This year, we have already exported one container of honey to the US. Last year, at least 2,500 to 3,000 tons of honey were exported from across the country. Farms reported high yields on account of pollination by bees. Most villages have agreed to rear bees alongside farming,” said U Soe

Naing, the head of the Magway Apiculture Division.

Beekeepers move their beehives, depending on the blossoming period of crops. The beekeepers produced honey in the irrigated sesame farms of Minbu, Pwintbyu, and Salin townships on the western side of the Ayeyawady river in April and May, while monsoon sesame farming was taken up in Magway township in June and July. Corn farming was undertaken in Myothit and Taungdwingyi townships in August, whereas plum farming was done in Kani, Sagaing Region, from September to November, and at Moenyio and Minhla in Bago Region in the summer. “In other countries, sunflower farmers have to hire beekeepers on their farms to breed bees. In Myanmar, some local farmers are aware of the advantages of breeding bees alongside farming. Some watermelon farmers from Daik-U in Bago Region hire beekeepers. We have to explain to local farmers that bees can fly one to two miles,” said U Thein Zaw, the chairman of the Magway Region Beekeeping Association.

While the Magway Region depot purchases a viss of honey for K2,500 for export, beekeepers sell a liter of honey for K4,000 in the market. Honey producers tour sesame, plum, lychee, and watermelon farms across the country to produce honey. (One viss equals 3.6 pounds.) Plum honey production accounts for 60 per cent of the total production across the country.—Zayyatu (Magway) ■ (Translated by Hay Mar)

Abide by the law to reinforce national stability

LOOKING back at the establishment of the 2008 Constitution, we can see that Myanmar's democratic journey is almost a decade old. Yet, its foundational principal of the rule of law is still surrounded by hesitation and trepidation.

Even now, society needs to be reminded to strengthen and support the rule of law and be educated on it. We have not made much progress in that regard. The people have become numb to the notifications and directives published over the years but are still largely clueless on the context of the law, have misunderstandings, or fear the law as a weapon wielded by those in office.

On close inspection, laws are rules to implement peaceful co-existence between people and communities and ensure their sustainability, development, coherence and fairness. The law is direct and explicit on what is right and wrong, and what should be done or avoided. It also clearly illustrates the penalties for breaking the law.

The law administers equity, freedom and justice without discrimination. Therefore, it goes without saying that no one is above the law, and any citizen who respects human rights and impartiality would abide by it.

This, of course, encompasses not just the general public, but also the government institutions and private organizations residing in the country. The administering government and the administrated public both need to have their own sense of responsibilities and accountabilities. Only then will society be governed with the rule of law.

The people need to grasp the fact that they cannot simply explain away transgressions by stating they did not know or understand existing laws. Likewise, it is the government's duty to ensure every citizen is literate on enacted laws and respectfully adheres to them.

The government and their numerous agencies and departments must do their best to regularly educate the people on the laws, bylaws, regulations and directives they have enacted or issued, and ensure their services are clearly communicated to the public.

The government needs to have certain restrictions on their authority for there to be strong rule of law. In other words, it must not become a totalitarian government. Furthermore, they must be free of corruption, have a transparent administrative system, promote the basic entitlements and rights of the citizens, ensure the stability and security of the whole society, and strengthen public faith and trust in the judicial system.

For decades, our country has lived through a complete reversal from the key requirements mentioned above. Authority was placed above the law, bribery and corruption were rampant, government accountability was non-existent, human and civil rights standards dropped abysmally, and the justice system was looked down on.

It comes to reason that those holding legal authority and the general public need to practice responsibility and accountability to proliferate the rule of law.

A vital ingredient to a democratic system, the rule of law must be strengthened by repealing or amending existing laws to be coherent with the modern era, and new ones must be legislated to meet the needs of the people.

In conclusion, the citizens and institutions of the nation must comprehend and adhere to the living laws to strengthen our justice system and safeguard the benefits of the nation and its people.

Innovative Thinking and Action for Health

By Dr Than Lwin Tun, Honey Soe (Ministry of Health and Sports)

GRAPHIC: BT

INNOVATION means the introduction of new things, ideas or ways of doing something. The process of thinking up something new or thinking about something old in a new way is called innovative thinking. The Union Minister for Health and Sports mentioned that we will do out of the box thinking, innovative thinking, and identifying newer approaches and practicing epidemiologic thinking. Moreover Peter Ferdinand Drucker, the widely known management consultant, educator and author said, "all organizations require one core competency: innovation." Innovative thinking is nothing like we are born with and how we develop innovative thinking. As it is far from being something we are born with, we can all become innovative and creative by developing the attributes that are common to all innovative people; thinking outside of the box, continually curious, looking at life from another's perspective, good listeners, lack of emotional attachments, etc.

Among all the good and progress being made in the world, there are much more yet to be done. Nowadays, the world is facing so many problems; climate change, pollution, malnourishment and hunger and substance abuse, etc. The global temperatures are rising and are estimated to increase from 2.6 degrees Celsius to 4.8 degrees Celsius by 2100. This would cause more severe weather, crises with food and resources and the spread of diseases. Pollution is one of the most difficult global issues to combat. People all over the world are challenged by various types of pollution; water, air, noise and soil, etc. Currently, there are 795 million people who do not have enough food to eat. The problems of hunger and malnourishment are closely intertwined with poverty.

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) address the global challenges, including poverty, climate, environment degradation, prosperity and peace & justice. At the same time, SDGs are considered a universal competence which should be added to all governments' compulsory agenda.

According to the Alma-Ata Declaration in 1978, health is a state of complete physical, mental and social wellbeing and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity and is a fundamental human right and that the attainment of the highest possible level of health is a most important world-wide social goal whose realization requires the action of many other social and economic sectors in addition to the health sector.

As it is widely accepted that health and wellbeing cannot be addressed from within the health sector alone, mental and social factors make themselves a room for health. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), mental health is a state of wellbeing in which individual realizes his or her own abilities, can cope with the normal stresses of life, can work productively and fruitfully, and is able to make a contribution to his or her community. The WHO stresses that mental health "is not just the absence of mental disorder." Mental health can affect daily life, relationships and even physical health. Mental health includes a person's ability to enjoy life to attain a balance between life activities and efforts to achieve psychological resilience. It is important at every stage of life from childhood to adult and common among people. Mental disorders are also associated with more than 90% of the one million suicides that occur annually. Suicide is a global public health problem that deserves attention from national health authorities in order to make policies and directives aimed to promote the public's mental health. According to the WHO, more than 800,000 people die by suicide a year, making it the principal cause of death among people fifteen to twenty-nine years old. Myanmar's mental health policy was last revised in 1995, including within the general health policy. The last revision of the mental health plan was in 2006. The mental health legislation which was enacted in 1912, entitled the Lunacy Act 1912 is outdated. Myanmar Medical Association and Sanofi created Community-Based Intervention Program to increase access to treatment. Social health is a person's ability to interact and form appropriate relationships with other individuals. If a person is socially healthy, he or she is more likely to have a stronger immune system and even when he or she suffers from one health problem or another, he or she is more likely to recover from it quickly. Socially healthy persons are less likely to have depression; which means they are mentally and emotionally healthier. It has significant impact on a person's mental, physical, and emotional wellbeing.

In 2017, Myanmar has developed Strategic Action Plan for Strengthening Health Information and information technology (IT) architecture are considered and included to the strategy.

The dynamic, robust, responsive and efficient health information system (HIS) is a basic prerequisite for effective functioning of the health care delivery system. The role of IT in health care cannot be omitted as it has potential to improve the quality, safety and efficiency of healthcare. Enteracy of community and providing effective and efficient health care to public. It is served as a knowledge sharing platform and also provides Information and Communication Technology (ICT) support services for health facilities. The tablet contains standardized health messages, essential manuals, guidelines and standard operating procedures (SOPs) for health professionals regarding public health care, medical care, laboratory, food and drug administration, planning, budgeting and staff affairs and research.

Myanmar's government has expressed a strong commitment to accelerating progress towards Universal Health Coverage (UHC) in which all people have access to needed health services of quality without experiencing financial hardship. Getting access to clean water and nutrition run first on the way to Health. In the endeavor to achieve UHC, we need to consider integrative parallel thinking of harmonized effective development by working together with collaboration of the following sectors; transportation as well as agriculture, communication and electricity.

The Association of Southeast Asia Nations (ASEAN) Community should put their efforts in this endeavor as the environment is an important factor contributing to disease and mortality in the developing world, including countries in Asia. We need to think globally and at locally. The importance of disease control programmes become increasingly pressing. For example, the "Actions Against Dengue: Dengue Day Campaigns Across Asia" was subsequently produced by ASEAN and WHO to document regional and national activities to commemorate ASEAN Dengue Day, every 15th June of each year. Another example gives us the Southeast Asia Tobacco Control Alliance (SEATCA), emerged as a major catalyst which works closely with key partners in ASEAN Member States for the advances made in tobacco control in South East Asia Region.

The Member States of ASEAN have a rich heritage of traditional medicine. As traditional medicine is the most widely available and affordable source of health care in ASEAN, its role in the primary health care cannot be omitted. In Myanmar, traditional medicine has existed since time immemorial. It is kind of like we are born with and the reliability of the public on traditional medicine has never been the least. So the risk of exploitation on people's reliability is an issue to be considered. Different ethnic groups have traditional knowledge and practices evolved from different ethnological, cultural, geographical, philosophical backgrounds. The main purpose is to put this knowledge into good use in the daily routine of their life.

In conclusion, while all the countries are marching to the UHC, it should be highlighted that innovative thinking and action for health is an essential platform for achieving UHC.

Democratic presidential hopefuls clash over health care in Detroit debates

WASHINGTON — Ten more Democratic presidential hopefuls clashed over health care on Wednesday, with heated exchanges on other topics during the second night of the party's second round of primary debates in Detroit, Michigan.

Senator Kamala Harris, responding to former Vice President Joe Biden's criticism of her recently-released health care plan, said Biden probably didn't read it.

She released a "Medicare for All" plan on Monday after months of inconsistency on the issue, clarifying that she does not support the total elimination of private insurance plans, a step back from her previous stance akin to that of Senator Bernie Sanders.

Biden's campaign later responded that Harris refused "to be straight with the American middle class" on the hefty tax burden brought by her plan.

Harris explained on the debate stage that her plan is responsive to American's needs, considering that private "insurance companies have been jacking up the prices for far too long."

Biden doubled down, telling potential voters to be cautious of a 10-year phase-in period proposed by Harris' plan. "Anytime someone tells you — you're going to get something good in ten years, you should wonder why it takes ten years."

The two polling frontrunners shared the stage with seven other contenders, including Senator Kirsten Gillibrand of New York, who challenged the two by saying they were "at risk of losing the forest for the trees," when the Republicans are chipping away at the Affordable Care Act enacted by former President Barack Obama.

The Wednesday night debate lasted over two and a half hours, during which candidates also battled around topics including education, law enforcement, race, climate change, trade, national security, the Russia investigation, and their individual electability.

Many condemned the current administration's immigration policy. "There's not a single person on this stage if were president would ever separate a child from their parents at the border," Senator Michael Bennet of Colorado said. "That is what his administration has done in the American people's name, they have turned our border into a symbol of hostility."

Senator Cory Booker of New Jersey also weighed in on the administration's treatment of undocumented immigrants, citing his visit to detention facilities. "Seeing children sleeping on pavement, people being put in cages, nursing mothers, small children, this is not necessary," he said.—Xinhua ■

Double attack targeting police kills dozens in Yemen's Aden

ADEN — Separate attacks by Shiite rebels and a jihadist suicide bomber killed at least 27 people in Yemen's government-held second city Aden Thursday, many of them newly trained police cadets, security and medical sources said.

The attacks were the first to hit the southern port city in more than a year and dealt a heavy blow to the government's reorganised security forces, which have been trained and equipped by the United Arab Emirates.

The first attack was a suicide car bombing carried out by jihadists on a police station, a security source said.

Ten people, including three officers, were killed and at least 20 others were wounded, according to medics and a security source.

An AFP correspondent saw dozens of troops and police reinforcements helping the wounded outside the entrance to the police station in Aden's Sheikh Othman district.

"Ten people were killed, and we admitted 16 injured, including two in critical condition in MSF surgical hospital in Aden, following this morning explosion in Sheikh Othman police station,"

Doctors Without Borders (MSF) said on Twitter.

The second attack was carried out by the Huthi Shiite rebels, who said they launched a drone and a ballistic missile at a training camp west of Aden.

At least 17 policemen were killed and dozens wounded, a medical source told AFP.

NEWS IN BRIEF

US has intel that Osama bin Laden's son is dead: report

WASHINGTON — US intelligence has received information that Al-Qaeda founder Osama bin Laden's son Hamza has died, NBC News reported Wednesday.

NBC said three US officials had confirmed they had information of Hamza bin Laden's death, but gave no details of the date or place, and did not indicate if they had confirmed the information. Questioned by reporters in the Oval Office, President Donald Trump did not confirm or deny the report.

"I don't want to comment on it," he said. In February the US government put a $1 million bounty on Bin Laden's head, saying the man sometimes dubbed the "crown prince of jihad" was "emerging as a leader in the Al-Qaeda franchise." He had put out audio and video messages calling for attacks on the United States and other countries, especially to avenge his father's killing by US forces in Pakistan in May 2011.—AFP ■

Boko Haram kills 27,000 in Nigeria in decade-long militancy: UN

ABUJA — Over 27,000 people were killed in Boko Haram's militancy in Nigeria since the group launched operation in the northeast region of the country in 2009, according to data by the United Nations (UN).

A statement made available to Xinhua in Abuja on Thursday quoted Edward Kallon, the UN humanitarian coordinator in Nigeria, as saying 130,000 people have also been newly displaced from their homes.

"Rising insecurity in recent months has pushed over 130,000 newly displaced people on a long trudge. Arriving en masse to displaced camps, they are looking upon us for aid and protection," the statement said. Boko Haram, whose agenda is to maintain a virtual caliphate in the most populous African country, had also spread its tentacles to neighboring countries including Chad, Niger, and northern Cameroon.—Xinhua ■

Japan's Kono asks new UK foreign secretary for orderly Brexit

BANGKOK — Japanese Foreign Minister Taro Kono urged his new British counterpart Dominic Raab on Thursday to achieve an “orderly” exit from the European Union to minimize the impact on the global economy.

In their first talks since Raab was named as foreign secretary by British Prime Minister Boris Johnson on 24 July, Kono also called for efforts to ensure the withdrawal does not hurt Japanese companies operating in Britain, according to Japan's Foreign Ministry.

Several Japanese financial firms are preparing to move their main European offices away from London, while Honda Motor Co. said earlier this year it will close its Swindon plant in 2021 and Toyota Motor Corp. has said it may pull out of production in Britain around 2023 if the country exits the bloc without an agreement.

During the talks on the sidelines of annual ASEAN-related meetings in Bangkok, Kono said he hopes Britain will remain an attractive investment destination for Japanese companies even after leaving the European Union.

Raab, seen as a hard-line Brexiteer, assured Kono that the utmost effort will be made to address such concerns, the ministry said.

Johnson is seeking to strike a deal with the European Union by 31 October but has vowed to leave the bloc “come what may” by the deadline, fanning concerns of a no-deal Brexit.

Kono, meanwhile, welcomed Britain's interest in joining a revised Trans-Pacific Partnership, an 11-member free trade deal that covers 13 per cent of the world's gross domestic product and gives access to a market of 500 million people.

The member countries of the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership, which took effect in late December, are looking to expand the pact's membership base by inviting other countries.

China says has begun purchase of more US farm goods

BEIJING — China said Thursday that it had begun purchasing more US farm goods, addressing a key sticking point in efforts to resolve a drawn-out trade war between the two economic giants.

US farm exports to China are estimated to be the lowest in years as a result of Beijing's retaliation against President Donald Trump's tariffs on $250 billion of Chinese goods.

Trump said this week that China was supposed to start buying more American agricultural goods but had shown “no signs that they are doing so”.

discuss buying new agricultural goods including soybeans, cotton, pork and sorghum, commerce ministry spokesman Gao Feng told reporters Thursday.

His comments came a day after Chinese and US trade negotiators in Shanghai wrapped up their first face-to-face talks since Trump and Chinese President Xi Jinping agreed to a truce in June.

Companies “have already purchased some agricultural products”, Gao added, noting the companies had applied for exemptions to punitive tariffs China has slapped on US farm goods.

N Korean leader Kim oversaw launch of new type of rocket: KCNA

BANGKOK/BELJING — North Korea confirmed Thursday that it fired projectiles the previous day, with state-run media reporting that leader Kim Jong Un oversaw the test firing of a “newly-developed large-caliber multiple launch guided rocket system.”

The rocket system “would be an inescapable distress to the forces becoming a fat target of the weapon,” the Korean Central News Agency quoted Kim as saying, adding he “expressed satisfaction over the result.”

A South Korean military official, however, maintained the previous day’s assessment by Seoul that the North had fired two short-range ballistic missiles, judging from their flight characteristics.

The South has said they were fired from the Kalma area near the North’s eastern port of Wonsan at 5:06 am and 5:27 am and flew about 250 kilometers while reaching an altitude of about 30 km before falling into the Sea of Japan.

South Korea’s plan to carry out a joint military exercise with the United States this month.

The new type of rocket “will play a main role in ground military operations,” the news agency said.

Thursday’s KCNA report also did not refer to the US-South Korea military drill, slated to be held from Aug. 5 to 20. Pyongyang has denounced such exercises as a rehearsal for an invasion. —Kyodo News ■

US reaffirms commitment to “one-China policy”: foreign minister

BANGKOK — Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi emphasized Thursday that the United States has reaffirmed its commitment to the “one-China policy,” amid growing tensions between Beijing and Taiwan.

After bilateral talks with US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo in Bangkok, Wang told reporters that they also discussed issues related to the Korean Peninsula, although the Chinese foreign minister did not refer to North Korea’s recent launches of projectiles.

“No matter how many problems there are, it is important for the two sides to sit down and have face-to-face dialogue,” Wang said.

He and Pompeo met one day after Beijing said it will suspend independent travel to Taiwan by mainland Chinese tourists from Thursday, citing the current state of relations with the self-governed island. Taiwan and mainland China have been governed separately since they split following a civil war in 1949. Beijing has since then endeavored to undermine Taipei’s quest for international recognition. China has stepped up such efforts, particularly since President Tsai Ing-wen — who belongs to the independence-leaning Democratic Progressive Party — came to power in Taiwan in May 2016.

The government of US President Donald Trump, meanwhile, has bolstered already close ties with Taiwan, which China considers a renegade province awaiting reunification. In Hong Kong, mass protests continue, with citizens in the special administrative region calling for a withdrawal of a controversial extradition bill that would allow the transfer of fugitives to mainland China. —Kyodo News ■

Chinese army backs Hong Kong’s handling of protests

HONG KONG — The head of China’s People’s Liberation Army in Hong Kong gave full support to the local authorities’ handling of protests targeting the government but stopped short of saying if the army will intervene to help maintain public order, according to media reports Thursday.

Speaking at a reception celebrating the 92nd anniversary of the PLA Wednesday night, the commander of the army’s Hong Kong garrison Chen Daoxiang said the series of violent events is “not to be tolerated and strongly condemned.”

The Hong Kong garrison will support Chief Executive Carrie Lam’s administration in governing according to law, the Hong Kong police, and relevant government departments and the judiciary in punishing violent lawbreakers, Chen told the guests, as seen in a video clip posted by media.

Protests have been held almost every weekend since June against the government’s effort to amend a law that would allow the transfer of fugitives to mainland China and other jurisdictions.

While Lam, the territory’s leader, has since suspended the legislative process in an attempt to restore calm, protesters are calling for the bill’s full withdrawal.

Their demands have also grown to include greater democracy, the release of those arrested and an inquiry into alleged police misconduct.

While mostly peaceful, some of the protests have turned violent, with riot police firing tear gas, rubber bullets and sponge grenades to disperse the crowds.

The escalating violence between the groups has raised questions whether the Chinese military should be deployed to help bring the chaos under control. According to the Garrison Law, the Hong Kong authorities could, after seeking approval from Beijing, ask for the troops’ deployment in the territory.

A three-minute video showcasing the Chinese army’s might was posted on the Hong Kong garrison’s official Weibo social media account late Wednesday. It includes a segment showing the army’s ability to tackle terrorists and maintain public order that seemed to be targeting Hong Kong’s protesters.

“All consequences are at your own risks,” a soldier yelled through a speaker in Cantonese, the common dialect used in Hong Kong, in one scene, before a formation of troops equipped with anti-riot gear marched while firing what is believed tear gas at dozens of people dressed as protesters.

Armored vehicles, portable barbed wire and water cannon were showed before another scene in which scores of protesters were captured with their arms tied behind their backs. —Kyodo News ■

Johnson faces UK election test as Brexit battle looms

LONDON — Britain's Boris Johnson faces his first test at the ballot box Thursday in a by-election that could reduce his parliamentary majority to one, making it harder to enact his Brexit plan.

Just over a week after he took office as prime minister, Johnson's governing Conservative party looks set to lose the Welsh seat of Brecon and Radnorshire to a pro-European candidate.

He is already facing strong opposition in the 650-seat parliament to his plan to take Britain out of the European Union without a deal if necessary on 31 October.

Victory for the anti-Brexit Liberal Democrats in Brecon would embolden those opposition MPs and some Conservatives who have pledged to do whatever it takes to stop a "no deal" departure.

Finance minister Sajid Javid on Wednesday announced an extra £2.1 billion ($2.6 billion, 2.3 billion euros) to prepare for the possibility of no-deal, with a parliamentary showdown looming when MPs return in September.

The extra cash will be used to launch a public information campaign and "accelerate preparations at the border, support business readiness and ensure the supply of critical medicines," said a government statement.

Brexit party challenge

Thursday's by-election was called after former Conservative MP Chris Davies was forced out, following his conviction for making false expenses claims.

He insists it was an honest mistake and is standing again, but polling points to a win for the Lib Dems, who have previously held the seat.

Number Cruncher Politics, a polling consultancy, put the Lib Dems on 43 per cent, the Conservatives on 28, Nigel Farage's Brexit party on 20 and Labour on eight percent.

However, another Wales-wide survey by YouGov published this week gave an unexpected boost to the Conservatives, which experts attributed to a modest "Boris bounce".

Brecon and Radnorshire voted 52 percent to leave the European Union in the 2016 vote — echoing the UK-wide result.

Johnson, a leading Brexit campaigner in the referendum, made a low-key visit on Tuesday to meet with Davies.

He urged voters not to defect to the Brexit Party, which has been capitalising on the political deadlock over Britain's EU departure.

"The Brexit party cannot deliver Brexit, only the Conservatives can," Johnson said, adding that the Lib Dems "will do everything they can to stop Brexit".

In European elections in May, the Brexit Party won 31 percent of the vote, pushing the Conservatives into fifth place with just nine percent.

The pro-European Welsh nationalists and Green party are not fielding candidates in Brecon to avoid splitting the anti-Brexit vote.—AFP ■

Russian naval drills kick off in Baltic Sea

MOSCOW — Russia is conducting large-scale Ocean Shield-2019 naval exercises in the Baltic Sea from Thursday to 9 August, the Russian Defence Ministry said Thursday.

A total of 49 ships and combat boats, 20 support vessels, 58 aircraft of the Navy and the Aerospace Force as well as 10,634 personnel are participating in the drills, it said in a statement.

The main task of the drills led by Russian Navy Commander-in-Chief Nikolai Yevmenov is to practice the deployment of the inter-fleet grouping of the Navy.

Another task is to check the readiness of the Navy to protect national interests and the managing skills of its commanders, it said.

Four Kurdish security members killed, three wounded in IS attack in eastern Iraq

BAGHDAD — A total of four members of the Iraqi Kurdish security force were killed and three others wounded in an overnight attack by Islamic State (IS) militants in a Kurdish area near the provincial border between the provinces of Diyala and Sulaimaniyah, a security source said on Thursday.

The incident took place late Wednesday night, when the extremist IS militants attacked an outpost manned by a Kurdish security force, known as Asayish, near the village of Kulajo, prompting a fierce clash between the two sides, an Iraqi army officer told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

Kurdish reinforcement troops arrived at the scene but were hit by a roadside bomb and then the troops joined the clash against the extremist militants which ended before dawn, the officer said.

The army also sent armored vehicles to the scene after receiving a request from the Kurdish forces for help, the officer said, adding that the attack has left four Kurdish security members killed and three others wounded.

However, according to the website of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan (PUK), one of the two major Kurdish parties, confirmed the attack on the Kurdish security forces in Kulajo, but said the Asayish and Peshmerga forces repelled the attack that left four Kurdish security members killed and seven others wounded.

The security situation in Iraq was dramatically improved after Iraqi security forces fully defeated the extremist IS militants across the country late in 2017. IS remnants, however, have since melted in urban areas or resorted to deserts and rugged areas as safe havens, carrying out frequent guerilla attacks against security forces and civilians.—AFP ■
