At least 22 tigers recorded in Myanmar: Forest Dept

Photos captured by trap cameras in a recent survey between 2016 and 2018 have shown that at least 22 tigers remained in Myanmar, according to a press statement issued yesterday by the Forest Department, under the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation.

The survey covered 8 per cent of the tiger habitat in Myanmar. The data came as the department observed World Tiger Day yesterday in Nay Pyi Taw.

Speaking at an event held to mark the day, U Ohn Win, the Union Minister for MNREC, said: "We take pride in the fact that Myanmar is one of the 13 countries in the world which have a tiger population."

"We have forests which can provide a habitat to tigers, and this has kept alive our hope that tigers can breed in our forests," he added. The department's survey has showed that about 7 per cent of the Myanmar's total area, or over 12 million acres, serves as a habitat for tigers.

The Global Tiger Day or World Tiger Day was started in 2010 at the Saint Petersburg Tiger Summit, Russia, to spread awareness about the decline in wild tiger numbers and encourage the work of tiger conservation. According to the WWF, around 3,900 wild tigers are left in the world as of today, with 70 per cent of the tiger population found in India. — MNA ■

World heritage tag may provide fillip to Bagan lacquerware, say businesses

WITH the ancient city of Bagan having been declared as a UNESCO World Heritage Site, traditional lacquerware businesses in the area will get the opportunity to attract the interest of international buyers, said U Maung Maung, who owns a Pyittinehaung Myanmar traditional lacquerware business.

The art of making lacquerware emerged in Myanmar in the 12th and 13th century A.D., during King Anawrahta's reign, and now, Bagan is well-known for its lacquerware. While the tangible arts of Bagan can be seen at the ancient temples, lacquerware count among the region's intangible arts, with most visitors observing the traditional art and buying lacquerware as souvenirs, he said.

"More visitors are thronging to Bagan after it was listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site, and Bagan's traditional lacquerware products are expected to penetrate the global market and draw foreigners' attention. With tourism business flourishing in Bagan, lacquerware artisans are hoping to develop their businesses," said U Maung Maung.

Currently, lacquerware are mostly produced the traditional way. But, local artisans have begun introducing innovations with the help of ASEAN lacquerware artisans to boost the traditional lacquerware sector. — Min Htet Aung (Mandalay sub-printing house)

Cucumber growers see losses during harvest time in Kyaukpadaung Tsp

WITH the price of cucumber on the decline, growers from villages near the Kyatmauktaung dam in Kyaukpadaung Township of NyaungU District have reported losses this harvest season.

The villages near Kyatmauktaung usually cultivate seasonal crops as well as a variety of other crops, using underground water, in three seasons. The harvested crops are sold directly in the market and placed in the market through merchants.

"The upper, eastern, and lower villages of Kyatmauk-taung dam cultivate vegetables and a variety of crops. Early in the harvest season, the price of one cucumber was K120. Later, the it fell to K30, and growers suffered heavy losses," said U Tin Tun Aung, a cucumber grower from Legwa village.

"Cucumber cultivation is not easy, and the prevailing price cannot even cover the cultivation cost. Therefore, growers have failed to make a profit," said U Nay Myo Tun, a cucumber grower from Montgone village. — Ko Htain (Ngathayauk)

Over 150 enterprises pull investments into manufacturing sector in Oct-Jun

MYANMAR'S manufacturing sector attracted 153 enterprises with an estimated capital of US$988.7 million between October and June in the current financial year

The country's manufacturing sector is largely concentrated in garment and textiles produced on the Cutting, Making, and Packaging basis, which contribute to the country's GDP to a certain extent.

The sector has the potential to create the largest number of jobs for local residents. There are currently over 600 garment factories in Myanmar, which employ more than 300,000 workers.

The CMP industry has emerged as a very promising one in the export sector. The value of CMP exports was just $850 million in the 2015-2016 fiscal year, but it tripled within two years to reach $2.5 billion in the 2017-2018FY, as per figures provided during the Myanmar Global Investment Forum 2018, held on 12 September.

In the last mini-budget (April-September, 2018), exports of clothes made under the CMP system were valued at $2.27 billion. The value of CMP exports crossed US$2.56 billion in the period from 1 October to 10 May in the current fiscal year.

Japan is the largest market for Myanmar apparel, followed by the European Union. China, Korea, Japan, and other countries have also invested in the sector.

Investors prefer countries like Myanmar, where labour is cheap.

In the current FY, the manufacturing sector is predicted to remain the top recipient of foreign direct investment.

The income from CMP exports is targeted to reach $10 billion by 2024, according to the Myanmar Garment Entrepreneurs Association. — GNLM

Commerce Ministry negotiating with China to resume pineapple exports

THE Ministry of Commerce has been negotiating with China for resuming pineapple exports, which have been banned by the neighbouring country since 15 June, 2019, according to news released online by the ministry.

When the mango season ends, the seasonal fruit pineapple is in abundant supply in the markets. Therefore, the Ministry of Commerce has held a series of negotiations with China's government to create a legal export channel for pineapples, said U Khin Maung Lwin, assistant secretary, Commerce Ministry.

"To allow legal export of fruits to China, China's food safety inspection body is screening tissue-culture banana. We are discussing pineapple exports with them as well," he said.

At present, mangosteens, rambutans, lychees, watermelons, and muskmelons grown in Myanmar have been certified by China's food safety inspection mechanism, the General Administration of Quality Supervision, Inspection, and Quarantine (AQSIQ), for legitimate export. The Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation has already sent information on tissue-culture banana, lime, pineapple, avocado, and pomelo to China.

China has been clamping down on illegal goods since the second week of October, 2018. The policy change by the neighbouring country has hurt exports of Myanmar's agro products through the Muse gate. China has imposed a 50-per-cent tax on entry of goods that are not included in the quota list, as per a government-to-government pact. However, Myanmar merchants and their Chinese counterparts are finding the tax rate exorbitant. China accounts for 95 per cent of Myanmar's fruit exports. Watermelons top the list of fruits exported to China, followed by mangoes and muskmelons. — GNLM

Smart card payment to come to school bus services in August

By Nyein Nyein

STUDENTS who ride the school bus will be issued smart cards in August, said U Aung Nyi Nyi Maw, the managing director of the Yangon Region Transport Authority.

Information about the students, including their profiles and addresses, will be embedded in the card. The application forms for the cards have been prepared.

"The forms for smart cards have been distributed to parents. We will fill in the data after the forms are returned. We are planning to issue the cards next month," said U Aung Nyi Nyi Maw.

"With the help of the smart cards, parents will be able to trace what time their children get on and get off their school bus. The application will show information on the timings when the smart cards will work," he said.

The smart cards for elementary, middle, and high schools will vary, and will have attractive cartoon designs on them.

The smart cards will help ensure the safety of students, according to the YRTA.

The Yangon Region government has initiated a school bus transport plan, and has purchased 200 buses, of which 102 are currently serving 12 schools, said U Aung Nyi Nyi Maw. The 102 school buses are transporting 1,946 students.

Other schools have also asked for transportation facilities for students, and they are discussing the routes.

"The number of students wanting to use school bus services is rising. We are collecting data. We will provide the services after drawing up the routes," said U Aung Nyi Nyi Maw.

The Yangon Region government's school bus scheme aims to create a systematic transport system, instead of allowing a market-based system, said U Phyo Min Thein, the Chief Minister of the region.

In the current academic year, school buses which meet the 12-point guideline issued by RTAD have been allowed to operate in the region. While new school buses are being imported, old school vehicles are still operational.

Mandalay likely to attract higher number of tourists this year

TOURIST arrivals in Mandalay Region in the first quarter (Q1) of this year were estimated at over 300,000, and more travellers are expected to visit the region this year than in the previous years.

Under a year-long trial (1 October, 2019 to 30 September, 2020), Italian, Spanish, Australian, Swiss, German, and Russian tourists who hold ordinary passports will be granted visas on arrival, said U San Yu, the assistant director of the Directorate of Hotels and Tourism for Mandalay Region.

Starting from October, 2018, ordinary passport holders from Japan, South Korea, Macau, and Hong Kong are not required to apply for a tourist visa for visits of up to 30 days, and they can enter and leave from all international checkpoints. Also, Chinese tourists are being issued visas on arrival.

The number of tourist arrivals from Asian countries has been increasing, with most tourists coming in from China. Tourist arrivals from China doubled in January this year against last year, followed by arrivals from France and Thailand. A high tourist inflow helps in the growth of related businesses such as hotels, motels, restaurants, and souvenir shops, said an official from the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism.

The hotels and tourism department has been creating new destinations and arranging more inbound tourism sites, he said.

The influx of tourists to Mandalay Region was registered at over 385,000 in 2016, over 483,780 in 2017, and over 492,000 in 2018.—Min Htet Aung/ Ko Khant

Afghan presidential candidates fear for safety after attack

KABUL— Candidates jockeying to become Afghanistan's next president lashed out at the incumbent Ashraf Ghani on Monday after deadly violence cast a shadow over the first official day of campaigning.

At least 20 people — most of them civilians — were killed and 50 others wounded Sunday when a suicide attacker and gunmen targeted the Kabul office of Ghani's running mate, Amrullah Saleh.

The violence served as a grim reminder of Afghanistan's woeful security situation and the sort of mayhem and murder that have beset previous polls.

"The government has not paid attention to the candidates' security," said Qadir Shah, the spokesman for Hanif Atmar, one of the top contenders looking to stop Ghani securing a second term at September 28 elections.

Shah told AFP that he and 12 other candidates had delayed plans to launch their campaigns, primarily over security concerns but also because they see Ghani as using his office for an unfair advantage.

date, said his supporters worry about a repeat of the kind of violence that marred previous polls, when insurgents launched frequent attacks.

"Most of the candidates are worried about the security, but they still have to campaign. The government must provide security for us and the people,"

Torsan said.

Interior ministry spokesman Nasrat Rahimi said security forces had been preparing for the elections for eight months and taken "serious measures" to protect candidates, including the provision of armoured vehicles.

No group has claimed responsibility for Sunday's attack.

Boycott threats

Saleh, who escaped without serious injury, is the former head of Afghan intelligence and an outspoken critic of the Taliban and Pakistan — a country he blames for backing the insurgents.

The Taliban, along with some Afghan stakeholders, made a vague pledge this month to reduce civilian casualties. Security officials have said the insurgent group is now distancing itself from attacks killing ordinary Afghans.

A Taliban spokesman did not respond to a request for comment.

Afghanistan's presidential election, the fourth since the Taliban were ousted in a US-led invasion in 2001, is off to a rocky start.

The poll has been delayed twice this year as the US leads a push to forge a peace deal with the Taliban, and voters have little faith in the system following widespread fraud allegations in 2014.

Atmar, who was Ghani's former national security advisor, and 12 other candidates have even threatened to boycott the election unless the international community can help ensure it is "clean".

There are also doubts the election will happen at all, with lingering questions about whether Afghanistan should hold a key poll just as the US and Taliban are negotiating.—AFP ■

Brush fire scorches 154 acres in S California, destroying home

LOS ANGELES, —A 154-acre (62.3-hectare) brush fire racing up from a rugged area in Chino Hills city in the US state of California has devoured a large house and spread alarmingly close to others on Sunday afternoon.

The home on Miramonte Court appeared to be destroyed. Firefighters used ladders to spray directly into the residence from the caved-in roof, according to local media reports.

The fire began near Falling Star Lane and Chino Hills Parkway. At shortly after 2 pm local time (2100 GMT), Chino Valley Fire reported it reached 50 acres (20.23 hectares).

The blaze, dubbed the "Star Fire," had reached 154 acres by 9:30 pm local time (0430 GMT Monday), with 65 percent containment. Forward progress was halted, said Massiel De Guevara, spokeswoman for the Chino Valley Fire District.

De Guevara said firefighters with the Chino Valley Fire District and Cal Fire's San Bernardino County Unit would likely be working on putting out the fire through the night. There were no neighborhood evacuations and no injuries, she said. The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Some local roads were closed, though Chino Hills Parkway had reopened by about 10:30 pm local time (0530 GMT Monday). —Xinhua ■

At least 52 dead in Brazil prison riot: official

RIO DE JANEIRO — At least 52 inmates were killed in a prison riot in northern Brazil on Monday as rival gang factions fought each other, an official said.

Sixteen of the dead were decapitated in the second major eruption of violence to rock the country's severely overpopulated and deadly prison system in as many months.

Fighting broke out in the Altamira Regional Recovery Center at around 7:00 am (1000 GMT), an official from the Parastate government's penitentiary department told AFP.

Two guards were taken hostage during the clashes that ended at around midday. They were eventually freed.

Footage broadcast by SBT Altamira purportedly showed thick black smoke rising from the prison compound and people sitting on the roof of a building.

In May, at least 55 prisoners were killed in several jails in the neighboring state of Amazonas in violence also blamed on an apparent gang dispute.

Most of the victims were killed by asphyxiation, the state government said at the time.

The federal government dispatched reinforcements to boost security in the jails.

Brazil has the world's third largest prison population after the United States and China, with 726,712 inmates as of June 2016, according to official statistics.

The population is double the capacity of the nation's jails, which in the same year was estimated to be 368,049 inmates.

The federal government had been expected to add another 115,000 inmates by the end of 2018, Human Rights Watch said in a recent report.

Along with severe overcrowding and gang violence, riots and breakout attempts in Brazil's prisons are not uncommon.—AFP ■

More efforts needed to save tigers from extinction

MYANMAR is one of the 13 countries where tigers can be found, which is a matter of pride for the nation. About 7 per cent of Myanmar's total area, or over 12 million acres, serves as a habitat for at least 22 tigers.

The latest count was conducted with camera traps, set up in the habitats of tigers and their prey, in northern and southern Myanmar, as part of efforts to conserve the iconic species, which is now at a critical crossroads, facing numerous threats to its survival.

Myanmar still has quality forests, which serve as habitats for tigers. This has kept hopes alive for the tiger population increasing in the country.

To save the tigers, we need to adopt a zero tolerance approach towards poaching and wildlife trade — a multi-million dollar industry fuelled by the demand for meat, skin, medicines, and other tiger products.

species, has seen more cases involving the trade of elephant parts than other wildlife.

Within the 20-year period from 1994 to 2014, the country has lost millions of tons of hardwood due to illegal logging, as well as rare wildlife, such as elephants, bears, tigers, leopards, peacocks, and snakes, on account of poaching.

Efforts towards both conservation as well as prevention of poaching, ignited by demand from neighbouring countries, should focus on increasing our tiger population.

To save the tigers, we need to adopt a zero tolerance approach towards poaching and wildlife trade — a multi-million dollar industry fuelled by the demand for meat, skin, medicines, and other tiger products.

The number of valuable species in the country is witnessing a rapid decline. If this downward trend continues unchecked, some of our iconic national treasures — elephants, tigers, bears, pangolins, and birds — will become extinct.

Realistically, we can save tigers only through joint efforts between the government, international and local NGOs, local groups and community members.

My perspective on child rights

Prof. Dr. Aung Tun Thet

LIFE is strange. I get to unintentionally witness the results of an issue I resolved over 30 years ago.

The year is 1989. It has only been a month since I returned from Germany after completing my PhD. The university was closed as well. I just needed to show my face to the department once in the morning. I wanted to take on a lot of work but wasn't given that satisfaction.

Yet, an unexpected opportunity arose. When the State Law and Order Restoration Council was formed, Sayagyi Dr. Pe Thein was the only civilian appointed as minister. Furthermore, he was tasked with overseeing two ministries and we have been acquainted since before.

After receiving my PhD, I conducted research in varied fields, including the health sector. Thus, I would regularly present research papers at the annual gathering of the Myanmar Medical Association. Sayagyi was interested in research himself so we became fast friends. He used to be the director-general for three departments under the Ministry of Health.

Forming a new department

Now, when he became the Minister for Health, he offered me the post of director-general for the new planning and statistics department he wanted to form. It was an enviable position indeed. I was a lecturer at the University of Economics at the time and, I admit, the prospect of going three to four positions higher than I was sounded pleasing to me.

However, I worried that I may not get the job when it came to filling out my résumé. I have ran into several issues due to my status of certain members of my family. Colonel Myo Aung, my uncle, was an active member for the National League for Democracy, while father and older brother Thakin Ba Thein Tin was spreading his voice in politics.

I told Sayagyi about all of this. He knew me quite well. His wife, Prof. Dr. Kyu Kyu Swe was working in the same department with another uncle of mine, Prof. Dr. Soe Myint, at Mandalay's University of Medicine. Sayagyi told me not to worry and submit my résumé and I soon got the position of director-general without an issue.

Since it was a new department, we had to gather a lot of people. Captain Kyi Soe and U Aung Kyaing left to pursue education abroad shortly after we opened the department. Dr. Nyo Nyo, the younger sister of former president Dr. Maung Maung, provided invaluable assistance during that time.

And so the department began to trudge along. It was based at the old building on Theinbyu Road and I myself had my office in the Minister's Building. Now that I was given a government position, I could implement the plans I envisioned during my time at the university.

Making important changes

I think the most important change we made was forming the National Health Committee. The ministry can't handle healthcare enterprises alone, it needs to coordinate with other ministries as well. And that is the hardest part.

So, we formed the committee after Dr. Pe Thein and the higherups gave approval.

The Chairman was Secretary 1, I was secretary, and the committee members were from the ministries of planning and finance, agriculture, home affairs, and the Tatmadaw medical directorate group. They were energetic and alert.

The committee received letters not just on health but on related matters from all ministries. The first thing I did was to establish nationwide movements with CSOs and this led to the formation of the Myanmar Maternal and Child Welfare Association during Dr. Pe Thein's period. We also invited international CSOs to Myanmar.

Secondly, we tackled the rising population issue, which was left unattended for successive generations in our country. Population boom can have a negative impact on the health, social, economic and education sectors of our nation. With that in mind, we began working on potential consequences that can arise if it was left attended.

We submitted the matter to our superiors. I had received assistance from Dr. Ko Ko, Director of the Southeast Asia Department for WHO. At last, we succeeded in pushing forward the family planning project, a most important implementation for the long term.

The third task I did was related to child rights. The representative for World Children's Fund approached me on this matter. I studied the Convention on the Rights of the Child in detail so that our nation may join it. I decided that it would serve the best interests of our country and I made the remark with sufficient evidence to my superiors.

The decision didn't come easily. I pressed my superiors on the matter whenever I could and I approached the Attorney-General as well. They were worried because it was called a 'convention'.

I travelled to Bangkok and met with legal expert Prof. Vitis. I discussed the deeper meaning of conventions and to what extent they have influence on a country. I discovered that countries announce their reservations when signing. I had found the answer to alleviate my superiors' minds and we signed the convention at the University of Nursing in 1991.

Everyone had something interesting to bring to the discussion and there were two points of inter-

A new law for children's rights

Soon, we were able to enact the new child law in 1993. I was no longer in Myanmar at that time but I was overjoyed to hear that news. I always try to see the government and the nation as separate. The nation is a priority because it is lasting while the government is relevant to the existing time period.

Now, since the previous government administration, we have tried to make amendments that child's right law. The bill was recently passed at the Hluttaw and approved after the President viewed it. I am pleased to hear successful amendments taking place to fill in the needs of the present. The steps first taken 30 years ago are now newer and faster in development.

However, there were still worries, fear and protests against the amendment. Everyone has the right to voice their own differing opinion in a democracy and discuss about it. We need to base these debates on sound evidence and logic.

Discussion on the new law

U Ko Ko (Industrial College) moderated a roundtable on that bill on Sky Net and invited me. I discussed the bill with Amyotha Hluttaw representative Daw Hla Hla Soe, my former colleague Director-General Dr. San San Aye, the Deputy Director-General of the Advocate General Office, and CSO representative U Myo Myint Tun.

Everyone had something interesting to bring to the discussion and there were two points of interest I saw in our roundtable. It was about applying for birth certificate in adoption. But at a deeper level, it was about citizenship. We talked about how the 1983 Citizenship Law was still in effect.

I told everyone to keep the best interest of the child in mind when reviewing the bill. Children are innocent. It is the adult's duty to protect them.

The most talked about topic in Myanmar right now is about that child's right bill. These days, we are seeing unfortunate stories news of children circling around social media. The crimes committed against children are unbelievable. I am shocked these things are taking place in Myanmar.

This is why we need a comprehensive law. Our focus must be on their wellbeing. But we must question ourselves on whether the crime is increasing or we are able to uncover something existing faster.

Keeping the children in mind

Everyone from the government to the community has the duty to children. We must work together to resolve these issues facing us. We need to go beyond just providing sufficient food and clothing. We need to teach people the right ethics and morality and create a safe environment for our children.

I will push forward for the emergence of the child rights law. The hate and prejudice of grownups must not overwhelm and influence children. I urge everyone to put their wellbeing above all else.

Message on World Day against Trafficking in Persons

30 July 2019

HUMAN trafficking is a heinous crime that affects every region of the world. Some 72 per cent of detected victims are women and girls, and the percentage of child victims has more than doubled from 2004 to 2016, according to the UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC). Most detected victims are trafficked for sexual exploitation; victims are also trafficked for forced labour, recruitment as child soldiers and other forms of exploitation and abuse.

Traffickers and terrorist groups prey on the vulnerable, from people in poverty to those caught up in war or who face discrimination. Nadia Murad, the first trafficking victim to serve as a United Nations Goodwill Ambassador, was justly co-awarded the 2018 Nobel Peace Prize for galvanizing international action to stop trafficking and sexual violence in conflict.

Armed conflict, displacement, climate change, natural disasters and poverty exacerbate the vulnerabilities and desperation that enable trafficking to flourish. Migrants are being targeted. Thousands of people have died at sea, in deserts and in detention centres, at the hands of traffickers and migrant smugglers plying their monstrous, merciless trades.

But everyday indifference to abuse and exploitation around us also takes a heavy toll. Indeed, from construction to food production to consumer goods, countless businesses and enterprises benefit from the misery.

Multilateral action has generated progress, including through the Palermo Convention and its Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children. Most countries have the necessary laws in place, and some countries recently recorded their first trafficking convictions. But more needs to be done to bring transnational trafficking networks to justice and, most of all, to ensure that victims are identified and can access the protection and services they need.

The Sustainable Development Goals include clear targets to prevent abuse and exploitation, to eliminate all forms of violence against all women and girls, and to eradicate forced labour and child labour. On this World Day against Trafficking in Persons, let us reaffirm our commitment to stop criminals from ruthlessly exploiting people for profit and to help victims rebuild their lives.— United Nations Secretary General

Japan, US trade chiefs to hold negotiations later this week

TOKYO—Japanese economic revitalization minister Toshimitsu Motegi said Monday he will meet with US Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer later this week in Washington to advance negotiations for a bilateral trade deal.

Their two-day meeting from Thursday will take place after talks were put on hold during campaigning for Japan's 21 July upper house election.

Motegi told a press conference that "there isn't much daylight left" for negotiations, with both sides believed to be aiming for an agreement in September.

Climate change blamed for deaths of 200 Arctic reindeer

OSLO— Some 200 reindeer have been found dead from starvation in the Arctic archipelago Svalbard, an unusually high number, the Norwegian Polar Institute said Monday, pointing the finger at climate change.

During their annual census of the wild reindeer population on the group of islands in the Arctic ocean, about 1,200 kilometres (746 miles) from the North Pole, three researchers from the polar institute identified around 200 deer carcasses believed to have starved to death last winter.

Ashild Onvik Pedersen, head of the census, said the "high degree of mortality" was a consequence of climate change, which according to climate scientists, is happening twice as fast in the Arctic as the rest of the world.

"Climate change is making it rain much more. The rain falls on the snow and forms a layer of ice on the tundra, making grazing conditions very poor for animals," she told AFP.

In winter, Svalbard reindeer find vegetation in the snow using their hooves, but alternating freezing and thawing periods can create layers of impenetrable ice, depriving the reindeers of nourishment.

According to Onvik Pedersen, a comparable death toll has only been recorded once before — after the winter of 2007-2008 — since monitoring of the reindeer population started 40 years ago.

The increased mortality is also due in part to a significant increase in the number of reindeer in the Norwegian archipelago. That is partly thanks to climate change and the warmer summers, meaning more individuals compete in the same grazing areas.

Since the 1980s, the number of reindeer has doubled in Svalbard, and now stands at around 22,000, according to the Norwegian Polar Institute.—AFP ■

Colossal dinosaur bone find in France thrills scientists

ANGEAC-CHARENTE, (France) — Scientists have unearthed a huge two-metre (6.5-foot) dinosaur bone in a winegrowing village in southwestern France dubbed a "national treasure" for its prehistoric gems.

The 140-million-year-old thigh bone, which weighs 400 kilogrammes (880 pounds), is the latest discovery at the vast Angeac-Charente palaeontological site near Bordeaux, where experts and volunteers have dug up thousands of bones over the past decade.

But thanks to its remarkably good condition, the femur — which scientists say probably belonged to a gigantic sauropod — could help piece together an incomplete set of bones which the latest find resembles.

"We were wondering how big it was. We kept saying, 'Oh, there's more!'" said Maxime Lasseron, the doctoral student who made the gigantic discovery.

The largest land animals ever to roam the Earth, sauropods were massive plant-eating dinosaurs with a long neck and tail, towering up to 18 metres (59 feet) tall.

"It cost me a bit of money, because I had promised to bring champagne if it was complete," said Jean-Francois Tournepiche, the operations coordinator at what he calls "one of Europe's biggest dinosaur sites".

Tests will now compare the femur to another thigh bone discovered in 2010 to find out if they belonged to the same type of sauropod or even the same creature.

The bone's "preservation and perfect fossilisation makes it really unique", said Ronan Allain, a paleontologist at the French Museum of Natural History in Paris.

Prehistoric ecosystem

Now known for its cognac vineyards, Angeac-Charente was home to a vast ecosystem of dinosaurs, invertebrates and vegetation thanks to its humid, subtropical climate millions of years ago.

"There was a river and large coniferous trees," Allain said.

"Amphibians, crocodiles and fish lived in the swamp, and on dry land, small and large dinosaurs. It was full of life".

The discovery coincides with the 10th annual dig at the site, which stretches over 750 square metres (nearly 8,100 square feet).

But with more discoveries expected on the horizon, the site's owners have given diggers the go-ahead to excavate in another 4,000 square metres of land. "Another surprise for our 10-year anniversary," Tournepiche said. "At this rate, we'll be busy for the next 30 years!"—AFP ■

Thai health ministry on disease watch in drought-hit areas

BANGKOK, 29 July (Xinhua) — The Thai Ministry of Public Health said on Monday that it is on high alert for a possible outbreak of communicable diseases in drought-hit areas where residents have difficult access to clean water.

Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Public Health An-utin Charnvirakul told the media in Bangkok that he has instructed state officials in the drought-hit regions in the north to promote the practice of eating only cooked food, using serving spoons and washing hands.

“In drought-hit areas where people have rare access to clean water, communicable diseases are prevalent,” said Anutin, adding that “villagers must seek medical assistance if they find they experience gastrointestinal tract, such as diarrhea and food poisoning.”

The Department of Disease Control (DDC) director-general Suwannachai Wattanayingcharoenchai told the media on Monday that DDC has instructed 12 disease prevention and control centers nationwide to be on high alert on suspicions of communicable diseases. Persons with diarrhea should frequently sip water with Oral Rehydration Salts (ORS) to prevent dehydration, Suwannachai said.

The Meteorological Department said earlier this month that Thailand is going to experience the worst drought in a decade, as average precipitation across large swaths of the country has fallen far short of the monthly average.

The drought is expected to affect 105 districts across 12 provinces. — Xinhua ■

Russia declares state of emergency in four regions over wildfires

MOSCOW, 29 July (Xinhua) — Russia has declared a state of emergency in forests in four regions of Siberia and the Far East over mass wildfires, the Russian Aerial Forest Protection Service said Monday.

The state of emergency has been declared for the entire Krasnoyarsk and Irkutsk regions and parts of the Republic of Buryatia and Sakha (Yakutia) Republic, the service said in a statement.

According to the statement, by Monday forest wildfires were raging on nearly 3 million hectares in Russia, and extinguishing activities were underway in an area of 89,506 hectares.

It said over the last 24 hours, 51 forest fires were eliminated in Russia on an area of 13,422 hectares.

The service was constantly monitoring, with the help of satellites, 328 wild forest fires on an area of 2,731,541 hectares of remote areas, for which the extinguishing work has been terminated or did not begin due to difficult access, it said.

The Russian Emergencies Ministry said in a separate statement on Monday that its first deputy head Alexander Chupriyan had held a meeting on combating calamities in Russia.

It said a “special fire prevention regime” had been imposed on the whole of 24 Russian regions and in part on another 23.

The regime stipulates additional fire safety requirements and provides a set of organizational and technical measures to ensure the fire safety of facilities of state importance and enterprises of the military-industrial complex, the statement said.

Wildfires rage in Russian forests every year. They affected an area of over 3 million hectares last year, according to Russian media reports.

Meanwhile, the Emergencies Ministry said that the Irkutsk region and Khabarovsk and Amur regions of the Russian Far East also suffered from floods.

As of Monday, in the Khabarovsk and Amur regions 20 settlements with a population of 1,679 people have been flooded, while another nine settlements with a population of over 2,000 people had been flooded in the Irkutsk region.

The emergency services had to evacuate over 2,000 people, including 447 children, from the flooded areas, the statement said. — Xinhua ■

GUWAHATI, (India) — Wildlife officers are racing against time to rescue animals caught in floodwaters from torrential monsoon rains in India's famed Kaziranga National Park as the death toll rose to 215.

Most of the World Heritage-listed Kaziranga National Park — home to two-thirds of the world's remaining one-horned rhinos — in the northeastern Indian state of Assam was submerged by heavy rains.

While some animals were able to survive by fleeing to higher ground so far 215 wild creatures, including 19 rhinos and 129 hog deer have died, officials said.

The floodwaters have started to ease in some areas but forestry officials and rescuers from the Wildlife Trust of India continue to find distressed animals trapped in the floodwaters.

On Wednesday, a rhino calf was pulled onto a rescue speedboat and taken to a rehabilitation centre where it was checked by a vet.

“Today we rescued a rhino calf which is about two months old... She is very weak,” the Centre for Wildlife Rehabilitation and Conservation's senior veterinarian Panjit Basumatary told AFP.

“The flood this year has been massive and we found several distressed wild animals, especially in the fringe areas (of the park).” Basumatary said he was hopeful that most of the animals could be released back into the wild after they receive treatment at the centre. — AFP ■

Scientists discover Tyrannosauripus in east China

FUZHOU, 29 July (Xinhua) — Paleontologists from China and the United States have found a Tyrannosauripus, a giant dinosaur footprint fossil in eastern China's Jiangxi Province, marking the first discovery of Tyrannosauripus in China.

The fossil was unveiled on Monday to the public at the Yingliang Stone Nature History Museum, located in the coastal city of Nan'an, eastern China's Fujian Province.

The track, found in Ji-angxi's Ganzhou during road construction, was identified as Tyrannosauripus by scholars including Xing Lida with the China University of Geosciences, Beijing, Niu Kecheng with Yingliang Stone Nature History Museum and Martin G. Lockley from the University of Colorado.

Tyrannosauripus is a term coined to describe fossilized footprints that may have been left by tyrannosaurid.

“With sharp claws and well-developed metatarsal pads, the footprint is different from other large theropod footprints found in China, but it bears a strong resemblance to the tyrannosaurid tracks found in the United States,” said Xing, who tentatively attributed the track to tyrannosaurid.

The paleontologists inferred the trackmaker's body length from the footprint, suggesting the dinosaur could be as long as 7.5 meters, roughly the size of the Qianzhousaurus, a type of tyrannosaurid previously found in Ganzhou.

The excavation site of the footprint is only about 33 km from where the bone fossils of Qianzhousaurus were found, which increases the possibility that the footprint was left by tyrannosaurid, said Xing. — Xinhua ■

Stamps marking 1st US-N Korea summit on sale in Pyongyang

PYONGYANG — A set of stamps commemorating the first-ever US-North Korea summit in June last year are currently on sale in the North Korean capital, although denuclearization negotiations between the two sides show little sign of moving forward.

The set of three stamps was launched on 12 June, the one-year anniversary of the historic summit in Singapore between North Korean leader Kim Jong Un and US President Donald Trump, a female worker at a stamp shop in Pyongyang told Kyodo News on Sunday.

The stamps depict the first handshake between Kim and Trump, their singing of a joint agreement following the summit, and the full text of the statement.

Around Tuesday, a month after Kim and Trump met at the inter-Korean truce village of Panmunjeom on 30 June in their third encounter, stamps marking the event are scheduled to be released, the worker said.

be appearing in the stamps, the worker added. His absence is a further indication of Pyongyang's eagerness to continue talks with Washington without intervention from Seoul.

North Korea is believed to want the United States to provide security guarantees to Pyongyang. The two countries remain in a technical state of war, as the 1950-1953 Korean War ended in a cease-fire.

Ensuring the continuation of the current political system led by the Kim family is a long-sought goal by Pyongyang.

On Friday, North Korea's state-run media reported that Kim oversaw the "demonstration" firing of a "new-type tactical guided weapon" on Thursday to send a warning to the South against holding a joint military drill with the United States next month.

North Korea has long called on the United States and the South to halt joint military exercises, which Pyongyang regards as rehearsals for invasion.

Trump touts Ground Zero experience in 9/11 compensation bill signing

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump on Monday signed a law ensuring lifelong medical help for emergency crews sickened by toxic debris on 9/11, while claiming considerable experience of his own at New York's Ground Zero.

"Our nation owes each of you a profound debt that no words or deeds will ever repay," Trump said in the White House Rose Garden, where he was joined by some 60 first responders from the September 11, 2001 attacks.

The measure ends what had been an embarrassing situation in which Congress had to periodically vote on extending the compensation package for victims of the hijacked airliners that crashed into New York's World Trade Center, the Pentagon and a Pennsylvania field.

The fund was running out of money, amid political wrangling, but will now be guaranteed through 2092, meaning help through the lifetimes of all those involved.

Tens of thousands people, mostly firefighters and other emergency workers who spent long days sifting through the ruins of the Twin Towers, have become sick with cancer or respiratory diseases.

About 2,000 have already died, Trump said, and there are estimates that the toll will eventually outstrip the nearly 3,000 people killed on the day itself. "The first responders from across the country rushed to New York and worked endless days and sleepless nights. They fought to rescue every person trapped in the rubble, and then searched for months to find the remains of the fallen," Trump said.

Trump, a native New Yorker long synonymous with the city's real estate industry, claimed that he too had taken part in the hellish post-9/11 response at Manhattan's Ground Zero. "I was down there also. But I'm not considering myself a first responder, but I was down there. I spent a lot of time down there with you," he told the first responders at the White House.

It's not clear how much time, if any, Trump spent in Ground Zero, as the area was quickly sealed off by law enforcement.

Trump has previously claimed, without evidence, that he sent more than 200 workers to join the Ground Zero cleanup.—AFP ■

Iran, Russia to hold joint drill in Indian Ocean

TEHRAN — Iran and Russia have agreed to hold a joint naval exercise in the Indian Ocean in near future, Iran's navy commander announced Monday.

"We have agreed on a joint naval drill in the Indian Ocean region, and we hope that it will be held by the end of the year," Hossein Khanzadi told official IRNA news agency.

The coverage of the maneuvers could be extended to the Sea of Oman, Strait of Hormuz and Gulf, according to the Iranian navy commander.

"Coordination and planning meetings (over the drill) between Tehran and Moscow will start soon," he noted.

The announcement of the Iran-Russia joint drill in the southern waters of the Islamic republic comes amid the recent tensions between Iran and the West over the passage of oil tankers through the Strait of Hormuz. —Xinhua ■

Cambodia arrests 3 Nigerians with more than 20 kg of illicit drugs

PHNOM PENH — Cambodian police have arrested three Nigerian men in Phnom Penh on suspicion of trafficking more than 20 kg of crystal methamphetamine, the National Police reported on Monday.

The suspects were arrested on Sunday at a guesthouse in Phnom Penh's Meanchey district after they had smuggled the drug into the Cambodian capital from Laos. "Police seized more than 20 kg of the drug, which was packed in 21 plastic bags," the National Police said on its website. "The trio are being questioned and will be sent to the court for legal action in accordance with the law." The Southeast Asian country has no death sentence for illicit drug traffickers. Under its law, anyone found guilty of trafficking more than 80 grams of illicit drug will be jailed for life. According to an Interior Ministry report last week, the authorities had arrested 8,750 drug-related suspects, including 167 foreigners in seven nationalities, in the first six months of 2019, and confiscated a total of 343 kg of illicit drugs.—Xinhua ■

Some 300 firefighters battle violent wildfire in southern France

"300 firefighters are at work and are supported by an important aerial means. Seven planes are helping us to contain the fire," Colonel Christophe Pasquini, head of SDIS Operations Group in Var told BFMV news channel.

Pasquini said "it is still too early to know the origins of the disaster ... However, the extreme weather conditions that have affected the department in recent days could be a factor."—Xinhua ■

India's wild tiger population jumps to almost 3,000: census

NEW DELHI — India's wild tiger population has increased by more than 30 percent in the last four years, according to a new census released Monday, raising hopes for the survival of the endangered species.

The census found 2,967 tigers in the wild across the country, up from 2,226 four years ago in what Prime Minister Narendra Modi hailed as a "historic achievement"

"We reaffirm our commitment towards protecting the tiger," Modi said in Delhi as he released the All India Tiger Estimation Report 2018.

"Some 15 years ago, there was serious concern about the decline in the population of tigers. It was a big challenge for us but with determination, we have achieved our goals."

The massive surveys are conducted every four years, with the latest census spanning 15 months and using 26,000 camera traps that took almost 350,000 images across known tiger habitats, Environment Minister Prakash Javadekar said at the census release.

Images that showed the big cats were analysed using computer programmes to individually identify each creature. Wildlife and forestry officials also scoured 380,000 square kilometres of terrain.

In 1900, more than 100,000 tigers were estimated to roam the planet. But that fell to a record low of 3,200 globally in 2010.

That year, India and 12 other countries with tiger populations signed an agreement to double their big cat numbers by 2022.

Population numbers in the nation have risen steadily since falling to its lowest-recorded figure of 1,411 in 2006.

But they are yet to return to the figures recorded in 2002 when some 3,700 tigers were estimated to be alive in the country.

It is believed some 40,000 tigers lived in India at the time of independence from Britain in 1947.

Wildlife experts lauded the government effort and said the rise in numbers heralded a new chapter in the conservation of the big cats in India.

"The scale and magnitude of the assessment is unparalleled globally," Global Tiger Forum secretary general Rajesh Gopal said.—AFP ■

Iran says US rejected offer as 'not seeking dialogue'

TEHRAN — Iran said on Monday the US had rejected an offer from Tehran for more robust nuclear inspections in exchange for lifting sanctions because Washington is "not seeking dialogue".

Under the 2015 nuclear deal agreed to by Tehran, Iran must ratify a document, known as the additional protocol, prescribing more intrusive inspections of its nuclear programme eight years after the deal was adopted.

"If the US is really seeking an agreement... Iran can make the additional protocol into law (in 2019) and (the US) at the same time bring a plan to the Congress and lift all illegal sanctions," said foreign ministry spokesman Abbas Mousavi.

"But as we predicted it was rejected by them, because we knew that they are not for talks or an agreement that would yield a proper result," he told a news conference. According to Mousavi, the proposal was made by Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif during a visit this month in New York to dismiss the idea of "Iran being against talks... (while) America is for dialogue".—AFP ■

New British PM waits for EU to move on Brexit

LONDON — New British Prime Minister Boris Johnson is waiting for EU leaders to agree to renegotiate their Brexit deal before he meets them, his spokeswoman said Monday, as the government stepped up “no deal” planning.

“He obviously wants to meet EU leaders and negotiate but not to be sat down and told that the EU cannot possibly reopen the withdrawal agreement,” the spokeswoman said.

Johnson, who took office last week, wants to change the exit terms struck by his predecessor Theresa May but insists he will leave the European Union without any agreement at all if necessary on 31 October.

Brussels says it will not reopen the text.

In phone calls last week, German Chancellor Angela Merkel and French President Emmanuel Macron both invited Johnson to visit, but he has yet to announce any foreign travel ahead of the G7 summit in August.

“The withdrawal agreement has been rejected by parliament a number of times now and clearly it’s not going to pass in its current form,” the spokeswoman said.

“It needs to change if there’s going to be a deal.”

May was forced to resign after failing three times to get the Brexit deal through the House of Commons, in the process delaying Britain's EU exit twice.

Opposition among MPs is focused on the “backstop” arrangement intended to keep open the border between British Northern Ireland and EU member Ireland.

Brussels says this is vital for peace in Northern Ireland, which was once plagued by violence.

But critics say it risks keeping Britain tied to EU rules long after Brexit and erecting trade barriers between Northern Ireland and the rest of the UK. “The backstop has to be abolished,” Johnson's spokeswoman said.

“He remains confident that the EU will stop claiming that the withdrawal agreement cannot be changed, but until that happens we must assume there will be a ‘no deal’ Brexit on 31 October.

“The government's central focus is preparing for that.”

A multi-million pound (dollar) advertising blitz is planned to alert businesses and ordinary people on what to do to prepare for “no deal”.

Johnson, who played a leading role in the Brexit campaign in the 2016 EU referendum, has also set up three new cabinet sub-committees to focus on the task.

A colleague from 2016, former environment minister Michael Gove, will chair a daily committee meeting on “no deal” planning.

Sincerity still key in new round of China-US trade consultations

BEIJING — With the 12th round of trade consultations between China and the United States to be held in Shanghai soon, China resumed the purchase of US farm produce while the US administration announced the exemption of additional tariffs imposed on some Chinese industrial products. The two sides have shown sincerity in implementing the consensus reached by leaders of the two countries in Osaka and bringing the negotiations back on track.

Tariff escalations bring losses for both the Chinese and the US economy. The talk of “decoupling” the two economies has been proved to be untenable, as shown by US farmers' panic over dwindling orders from China while the overall US economic growth decelerated due to trade frictions with other countries in the second quarter this year.

Take soybeans as an example. China is the largest importer of American soybeans, and about 90 per cent of China's soybeans need to be imported. It means that American soybean production cannot be separated from the Chinese market and China's domestic demand cannot be separated from American supply. Based on the commodity structure of bilateral trade, products like soybeans are the “greatest common divisor” between the two economies.

Soybean trade has proved again that cooperation is the only correct choice for both sides. The ups and downs of China-US economic and trade frictions show that the cornerstone of cooperation is to seek the greatest common divisor between them.

US soybean exports to China fell by about 47.6 per cent year on year in 2018 and Chinese soybean imports fell by 14.7 per cent in the first half of this year, further proving that when the two countries properly handle their core and major interests, bilateral relations will go smoothly. Otherwise, they will be in trouble.

Since 19 July, some Chinese companies have made enquiries about purchasing new farm produce from the United States such as soybeans and cotton, and a range of farm produce has been purchased based on market conditions. Behind these developments are China's unremitting efforts to show goodwill to break the current impasse in the trade negotiations.

The US side needs to meet China halfway. Leaders of the two countries agreed at their Osaka meeting to resume economic and trade consultations on the basis of “equality and mutual respect.” This consensus is in line with the public opinion of the two countries and is in line with global interests.

But getting a good restart won't be easy. In recent years, some people in the United States have been making “confrontational” noises, indicating that progress after the resumption of the talks will be complicated and tortuous.

It is hoped that the two sides will meet each other halfway and build up sufficient momentum for the talks to get back on track.—Xinhua ■

At least 3 dead, 1 injured in shooting in Southern France

PARIS — At least three people were killed and one was injured in a shooting in Southern France on Sunday evening, local media reported.

The incident occurred near a gas station in the Ollioules commune of the Var department, where an unidentified number of gunmen opened fire and killed “two men who were certainly targeted in the attack,” Robert Beneventi, the commune's mayor, told state-run radio France Info. A tourist couple were also caught in the incident and hit by stray bullets, Beneventi said, adding that the “innocent female victim” died while her husband was seriously wounded and sent to a local hospital.—Xinhua ■

China landslide death toll jumps to 42, nine missing

BEIJING — The death toll in a landslide which buried a village in southwest China rose to 42, state broadcaster CCTV said Monday, with nine still missing days after the disaster struck.

Search and rescue operations at the site in Shuicheng county, Guizhou province — where a thick torrent of mud buried 22 houses in the landslide on Tuesday — were stopped on Sunday night, the provincial government said. The government has earmarked 30 million yuan ($4.35 million) for search and rescue efforts in the province, Xinhua reported, as well as the relocation of victims.—AFP ■

Bangladesh struggles to contain record dengue outbreak

DHAKA (Bangladesh) — Bangladesh is in the grip of the country's worst-ever dengue fever outbreak, officials said Monday, with hospitals overflowing and social media flooded with pleas for blood donors. Eight people have died and there have been 13,637 cases of the disease so far this year, with nearly 1,100 people — diagnosed in the last 24 hours, according to official figures. “This number is the highest since we started keeping record on dengue patients nearly two decades ago,” senior health ministry official Ayesha Akter told AFP.—AFP ■

China calls for swift punishment of Hong Kong violence

BEIJING — China on Monday threw its backing behind Hong Kong's beleaguered leader and police, saying violent protesters must be swiftly punished following another weekend of running street battles in the financial hub.

What began as a mass display of opposition to an extradition bill two months ago has morphed into a wider pro-democracy movement that has thrown down the most significant challenge to Beijing's authority since the former British colony returned to Chinese rule in 1997.

While China has issued increasingly shrill condemnations of the protests in the last two weeks, it has largely left the city's pro-Beijing administration to deal with the situation.

Protesters had braced for a potential backlash from Beijing after China's top policy body on Hong Kong affairs called a rare press briefing on Monday.

But the cabinet-level Hong Kong and Macau Affairs Office merely reiterated its condemnation of the protests and Beijing's "strong" support for Hong Kong chief executive Carrie Lam and the city's police force, which has been accused of using excessive force against protesters.

"No civilised society or rule of law society will tolerate rampant violence," Yang Guang, spokesman for the Hong Kong affairs office, told reporters.

Yang blamed the violence on a "few radicals" and said it "bumped into the bottom line" of the "one country, two systems" principle that governs the financial hub.

He also accused Western politicians of making "irresponsible remarks" to "mess up Hong Kong" and contain China's development.

Another spokeswoman, Xu Luying, added: "We also believe that Hong Kong's top priority task right now is to punish violent and unlawful acts in accordance with the law, to restore social order as soon as possible, and to maintain a good business environment."

Last week, the defence ministry pointed to a Hong Kong garrison law under which the Chinese army could be deployed if city authorities requested support to maintain "public order". When asked under which pre-conditions the military could be deployed, Yang referred to the city's basic law, without elaborating.

Jimmy Sham from the Civil Human Rights Front, one of the groups organising protests, told reporters the press conference "just wasted 40 minutes of the Hong Kong people's time", adding Lam should have been sacked for "neglecting her duty and causing extreme chaos".

In an editorial on Monday, the state-run China Daily newspaper signalled Beijing's growing concern, saying: "What is happening in Hong Kong is no longer the airing of real or imagined grievances."—AFP ■

Japan to launch rocket with cargo vessel to space station in September

The Kounotori-8 unmanned cargo transporter is shown to the press on 19 July 2019, at the Tanegashima Space Center in Kagoshima Prefecture, southwestern Japan. TOKYO — Japan will launch a rocket to the International Space Station in September containing an unmanned cargo transporter, the country's space agency said Monday.

The HTV8, also called Kounotori8, meaning white stork in Japanese, will deliver about 5.4 tons of supplies to the astronauts aboard, including food and water, as well as batteries and devices needed for experiments, the agency said.

The Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency said the H-2B rocket will be launched on 11 September from the Tanegashima Space Center in the country's southwestern prefecture of Kagoshima. The cylindrical cargo transporter, measuring about 10 meters long and 4.4 meters in diameter, will also carry an optical communication system that is said to be useful when exploring the moon and Mars to Japan's experiment module at the ISS named Kibo, according to the agency. Kounotori8 is equipped with some new devices to be used for the HTV-X, a spacecraft under development as its successor.

3 dead, 15 injured after mass shooting at festival in California

LOS ANGELES — At least three people were killed and 15 injured after a gunman opened fire at an annual food festival in Gilroy, northern California, on Sunday afternoon, local police said.

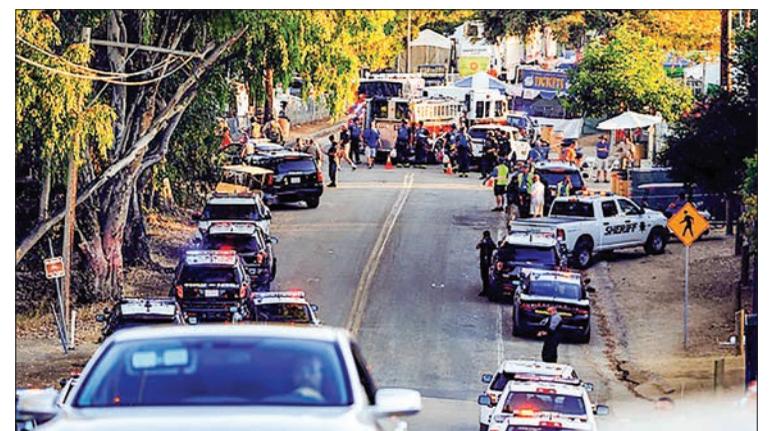

The gunman, who was shot dead by police arriving at the scene, cut through a fence at the venue to avoid security and began firing at attendees, according to the police.

Witnesses reported there may be a second suspect, but it remains unknown if the person had a weapon. Police are currently investigating the reports with the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other authorities.

The identities of the suspect and victims have not yet been released.

On Twitter, Gilroy police warned that the venue is "still an active crime scene" while the second suspect is still at large, while US President Donald Trump urged people to "be careful and safe."

A video posted on social media showed people fleeing in confusion with sounds thought to be gunshots heard in the background. A large number of police and emergency services were dispatched to the scene to evacuate attendees and close off the venue.—Kyodo News ■

Jiangsu Suning move on from Bale by signing Croatian Santini

SHANGHAI — Chinese state media proclaimed Gareth Bale's move to Jiangsu Suning definitively cancelled after the club signed the big Croatian Ivan Santini instead on Monday.

The Chinese Super League limits the number of foreign players each team can have and Jiangsu reached their quota by signing the Anderlecht striker, Xinhua news agency said.

Like Real Madrid's Bale, Santini is aged 30 and an attacker, although he enjoys nothing like the profile or reputation of the pacy Welshman. With the Chinese transfer window closing on Wednesday, Jiangsu moved for Santini, saying: "He will greatly enrich the team's offensive tactics in the Chinese Super League."

It comes a day after Bale's move to China collapsed because of wrangling between Real and Jiangsu over the fee, a source told AFP. Bale, who has been in the Spanish capital since 2013, had been expected to join the CSL outfit on a three-year deal worth over US$1 million a week.—AFP ■

Show me the money: S Korean soccer fans to sue over Ronaldo benching

SEOUL — More than 2,000 South Korean soccer fans will sue a sports agency after superstar Cristiano Ronaldo stayed on the bench when his Juventus side played a friendly in Seoul last week, a law firm said Monday.

The star Portuguese striker did not play a single second of the match against a K-league all-star team, ignoring appeals from the sell-out 65,000 crowd at the World Cup Stadium to lace up his boots.

With frustration mounting some even chanted the name of his great Argentine rival Lionel Messi.

When the game was first announced, organisers said the contract with Juventus obliged Ronaldo to play for at least 45 minutes, prompting many fans to splash out, according to Seoul law firm Myungan.

Tickets — priced from 30,000 won (US$25) to 400,000 won ($338) — sold out in just two and a half hours when they were released on 3 July.

"So far, more than 2,000 fans have contacted us to pursue the suit," Myungan attorney Kim Hun-ki told AFP. "We plan to officially file the suit on their behalf sometime next week, if the agency does not offer a concrete plan to compensate the ticket holders before then." The Italian team's flight from Nanjing in China was delayed, so that they landed only five hours before the scheduled start, delaying kick-off by an hour.

Robin Zhang, CEO of The Festa, the Korean agency which arranged the game, told local broadcaster SBS in tears that she had complained to Juventus vice chairman Pavel Nedved during the match.

He responded: "I also hope Ronaldo plays. But he says he doesn't want to. I'm sorry there's nothing I can do," she told SBS, adding that she will find "ways to compensate" ticket holders.—AFP ■

Klopp says City showdown won't influence Liverpool's title bid

EDINBURGH, (United Kingdom) — Jurgen Klopp says Liverpool's Community Shield clash with Manchester City on Sunday will have no bearing on their battle for the Premier League title.

The two sides will renew the rivalry that saw them take the title race to a tense final day last season.

City eventually claimed their second successive Premier League crown by a single point as Liverpool's bid for a first title since 1990 reached a painful conclusion.

Klopp's men made amends for that angst just weeks later as they beat Tottenham in the Champions League final and the Reds are expected to fight it out with City for the major honours again in the coming campaign.

A win against Pep Guardiola's team at Wembley would be a welcome psychological boost for Liverpool. But, having seen his pre-season plans disrupted by the absence of key players such as Mohamed Salah, Sadio Mane, Roberto Firmino and keeper Alisson due to the Copa America and African Cup of Nations, Klopp isn't putting too much stock in the result of the curtain-raiser to the English top-flight season.

"For me, it has nothing to do with the rest of the season," Klopp told reporters. "It's a game and, even if we only have eight players available, I would like to try to win it. "If we win it, good. Will it have an influence on the season? I don't think so."

"If we lose it, not good. Will it have an influence on the season? No, again, I don't think so. "We have to prove ourselves during the season, not in one game. If I have to say this would be the statement for the season, I would be really mad." Klopp admitted he was surprised the Community Shield isn't taken more seriously in England as he prepares to take part in the match for the first time.—AFP ■
